

ABSTRACT

A method and system for preventing access to secure areas of semiconductor devices using a control signal in conjunction with a secure area access obstruction circuit. A semiconductor device may have a user mode and a supervisor mode. When entering a supervisor mode, a control signal may transition from one logic state to another. Embodiments of the present invention utilize the control signal in conjunction with the secure area access obstruction circuit to prevent access to secure areas of the semiconductor device.

[illegible]